U.S. markets

The S&P 500 and Nasdaq closed lower on Thursday, as market bellwether Nvidia retreated from earlier gains, while investors evaluated recent economic data and commentary from Federal Reserve officials to determine the timing of interest-rate cuts this year. - Reuters

Preview

Fundamental

Expect futures to remain cautious today mirroring the mostly lower overnight Wall Street performance and ahead of the weekend while recovery in crude oil prices and bargain buying activities after recent rout might cushion the selling pressure. Stateside, U.S. stocks ended Thursday's trading session mixed with the Nasdaq Composite and S&P 500 just off their record highs after Nvidia's record-breaking surge, which catapulted it to the title of world's most valuable public company also took a breather while participants assessed recent economic report and commentary from Federal Reserve officials to determine the timing of interest-rate cuts this year. Regionally, Asian stocks struggle for traction to end mostly softer on Friday, oscillating near their highest in two years as traders waited for more U.S. policy clues, with stocks in China and Hong Kong underperformed, weighed down by lacklustre property shares, as Beijing left its key benchmark lending rates unchanged despite recent data showing the economy remains wobbly. Domestically, the FBM KLCI extended its losing streak to fourth consecutive session, as profit booking activities intensified in the absence of buying catalyst and reflecting the subdued performance of its regional peers amid cautious market sentiment. The index closed at 1,592.69, falling 7.10 points, with the top losers AMM, YTL, SIME, AXIATA and MAXIS shares. Futures to cash basis remained at 3 points discounts.

Technical

Futures contract opened on a steady note as bargain buying emerged after the recent rout but the upbeat tone unsustainable, prompted profit-taking activities tracking the underlying cash market weakness and following the regional peers' mixed tone. The June futures contract settled 7.5 points lower at 1,589.5, forming a short black bodied candlestick pattern with long upper and short bottom shadow indicating selling activity has taken control over the trading session. Technical wise, MACD indicator issued a sell signal while RSI indicator lingered at neutral region. Therefore, expect futures to trade range bound with slight downward bias today on the back of mixed U.S. stocks market overnight and ahead of the weekend while rebound in crude oil prices and mild bargain buying after recent sell down might limit the downside. Thus, the support and resistance can be pegged at 1,582.0 and 1,596.0 respectively.
